About PULSUS

Cancer is a disease in which cells grow abnormally and have the potential to spread to different parts. The abnormal growths without being harmful are called the benign tumors or the non-cancerous growths. Those cells which divide uncontrollably and spread to the nearby tissues are called the malignant tumors or the cancerous growths. The spread from the primary site (the place it originated) to the secondary site is called metastasis. The causative agents of cancer are called carcinogens. There are different types of cancers named based on their origin of development. These days many advancements have come in the field of cancer starting from diagnosis, treatment and prevention.
